TRAVEL WITH TEETH

The Amazon jungle is famous for many things, but few of its inhabitants have quite the reputation of the piranha, carnivorous fish which have been known to attack unsuspecting bathers. In fact, the incidences of piranha attacks in South America are on the rise, making Aqua Expeditions' four-night cruises perfectly timed for adventurous anglers and intrepid travellers. Beginning in the remote colonial city of Iquitos in Peru, the journey travels down the Ucayali River, the Amazon's largest tributary, as well as four other rivers, giving passengers a chance to not only fish for piranha, but also trek in the ancient jungle in search of monk saki monkeys, three-toed sloths, and blue-yellow macaws; photograph pink river dolphins; and visit isolated river-side communities by ship skiff. Of course, you'll explore in comfort with beautifully-appointed staterooms and Amazonia-influenced culinary treats by executive chef Pedro Miguel Schiaffino. www.aquaexpeditions.com
